JAMES WREN (ZACK) TAYLOR
Manager

Zack Taylor will be starting his fourth season as manager of the Browns. The dean of American League managers in the point of continuous service with the same club, Zack will be doing his utmost to lift the Browns to a first-division berth in the powerful junior circuit.

Taylor was born in Yulee, Florida, July 27, 1898 of English-Irish parents. He attended Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida for three years before starting his baseball career in 1915. His first contract was as a catcher, the only position he ever played, with the Valdosta club in the old Flag League. His ball playing days, interspersed with some coaching and managerial assignments, lasted until 1940. He was playing manager of the Allentown club for part of the New York-Pennsylvania league's 1935 season. In 1936 he was a Brooklyn coach and then piloted the San Antonio Missions for three consecutive years, 1937-38-39. In 1940 he moved north to manage the Toledo club in the American Association and remained there until June, 1941, when he was called to St. Louis as a Brownie coach. He held that position through 1946 and in that time became recognized as one of the best coaches of young pitchers in the game. When Luke Sewell resigned as Brownie manager late in the 1946 season, Zack took over the managerial reins for the balance of the American League schedule. In 1947 he moved to the National League as a coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates and at the close of that season was signed to manage the 1948 Browns. Zack did a fine job, leading the Browns to sixth place after everyone had picked them to finish last. In 1949 and 1950 the Browns finished seventh under Taylor's leadership.

Zack's major league connections included six years with the Brooklyn Dodgers, 1920 through 1925. He moved to the Boston Braves in 1926, and was with the Braves and New York Giants the following year. In 1928 he was back with Boston and in July 1929 was sold to the Chicago Cubs. He spent the next four years, 1930 through 1933 with the Cubs. He returned to the minors with Syracuse, N. Y. for most of 1934 and wound up the season with the New York Yankees, his first association with the American League.

The Browns' popular manager is married and resides in Orlando, Florida. His only offspring, Edd W. Taylor, is a sports writer for the Orlando, Fla., Morning Sentinel. Zack had planned to conduct a winter baseball school at DeLand, Fla. but postponed it because of the threatening world conditions. He is an ardent fisherman, hunter and golfer, but most of his time and efforts are directed toward baseball which remains the number one attraction in his life.

JOHN THOMAS TOBIN
Coach

Johnny Tobin, one of the brightest stars on the great 1922 Brownie club, starts his third year as a Browns' coach. One of Tobin's many jobs will be instructing players in the art of bunting, an art in which John is an apt master. In his playing days Tobin was known for his artistry in dumping a ball, and this, in addition to his great speed on the bases, made him one of the outstanding outfielders in the American League from 1917 to 1928. John spent ten years with the Browns and also saw service with the Washington Senators and Boston Red Sox, before finishing his career with a lifetime batting average of .315.

RALPH LEE WINEGARNER
Coach

Ralph Winegarner, oldest coach on the team in point of service with the local American Leaguers, will be starting his fourth season with the Browns in 1951. A veteran of many years service in the national pastime, Ralph has been in the St. Louis organization for several years. having managed Browns' clubs at Elmira, N. Y. and San Antonio, Texas. He was born October 29, 1909 at Benton, Kansas and still makes his home there. He attended Southwest College in Winfield, Kansas for one year before starting his baseball career with El Dorado, Ark. in 1930. Winegarner turned to the managerial field with San Antonio in 1942.

C. A. BAUMAN
Trainer

Bob Bauman, likeable young trainer of the Browns, is in his fifteenth season with the St. Louis club. Bob, whose brother Frank trains the New York Giants baseball club, is not a baseball trainer in the strict sense of the word. In addition to his diamond chores, Bob has trained various hockey teams and has been the athletic trainer at St. Louis University for the last 23 years. The Billikens amazing success on the basketball courts the last few seasons, can in a sense be credited to the fine work of Bauman in keeping the boys in A-1 condition. Bob, one of the most popular trainers in big league baseball, also ranks as one of the most capable. His work is so well known that his services are in constant demand, even by players of rival clubs. He made initial contact with the Browns when the head of the athletic board at St. Louis U., who was a part owner of a St. Louis farm club, suggested he contact the baseball club.

Probably the brightest spot in the entire Browns' organization in 1950 was the brilliant performance of the club's farm teams. With nine of their eleven affiliates finishing in the first division, the St. Louis minor league organization boasted a percentage of .818 for farm clubs capturing play-off berths. The Pittsburgh Pirates with ten out of thirteen clubs finishing in the first division took second place honors in the race for farm club laurels with a percentage of .769, while three clubs: the Boston Braves, Boston Red Sox, and New York Giants, shared the third spot with identical percentages of .750. Of the nine clubs the Browns had finishing in the first division, two finished in first place, two in second, two in third, and three in fourth.

PINE BLUFF MINOR LEAGUE SPRING TRAINING CAMP

The St. Louis Browns minor league spring training camp at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, one of the first of the large baseball training centers, stands forth as one of the most successful. Established in 1947, the Arkansas base has seen many of the present Brownies go through their conditioning paces under the ever watchful eyes of a corp of minor league managers and scouts. Unlike other organizations that place all their clubs, from Class AAA to Class D, in one camp, the Browns believe in separating the "little fellows" from the "big fellows." The Browns actually operate four spring training camps; the parent club itself training in California, the Class AAA farm in Florida, the Class AA farm in Texas, and the majority of the Class A through Class D clubs at Pine Bluff. This assures every player in the organization a close and careful examination to help him find his place on the baseball ladder. Staffed by experienced instructors, the Pine Bluff camp offers specialized training to the 250 or more players that assemble there each spring. The Browns have also operated a highly successful baseball school at Pine Bluff since 1949. Thirty-five students attended the first year and eight prospects were subsequently signed to professional baseball contracts. In 1950, twenty boys were signed out of approximately one hundred students. Classes start in mid-March and continue for ten days, followed by a month's training for the various clubs assigned to the base. The Browns' minor league system, one of the first to institute this type of camp, was the most successful in organized ball last season.
